

ABOUT US

Williams & Campo, P.C., is a law firm devoted to the representation of local government entities. The firm currently represents over 30 municipalities ranging from villages and special districts to some of the largest cities in Missouri. We provide our clients with a full range of legal services. Williams & Campo, P.C., currently serves as general counsel (e.g., as appointed city attorneys) for 14 local government entities. We also serve as special legal counsel to local governments for a wide variety of matters including litigation, general municipal, municipal finance, land use and development, infrastructure financing, public works construction projects, and the use of economic development incentives. For example, over the past 5 years, attorneys at our firm have represented municipalities on over 25 economic development projects that when completed will represent a total investment in these communities of over $2 billion.

All of the attorneys in our firm have devoted their legal careers to representation of local government entities. We are each active members of organizations that assist local government entities and are frequently called upon to speak to and help train elected officials and the staffs of these entities. We believe our experience and focus on local government law enables us to provide our clients with creative and tested advice on a wide range of legal matters. The attorneys of Williams & Campo, P.C. are committed to providing the highest level of service to all of our local government clients. Our goal is not only to meet our clients' legal services needs but to consistently exceed their expectations. We are proud to describe what we do as "providing legal solutions for local governments."
